

- Dianne Feinstein
U.S. Senator

I view human trafficking as the basest of crimes. Proposition 35 would raise sentences as high as 15 years to life for anyone who traffics a minor for sexual exploitation through coercion, violence or duress. It also levies fines as high as $1.5 million on the traffickers to fund victim services. It is long overdue, and I urge its passage.

We can't just stand by while sex traffickers get rich and throw away their victims. Prop. 35 is our opportunity to say we will not tolerate the sexual exploitation of women and children in California.

- Jada Pinkett Smith
Actress and Child Advocate

When Californians vote in favor of this ballot initiative in November, Proposition 35 will give California the toughest anti-trafficking laws in the United States.

- Marc Klaas

Child Advocate whose daughter Polly was kidnapped and killed in 1993

In communities across California there are monsters who prey on women and children – both on the streets and online. With Prop. 35, we can help protect innocent children by requiring all registered sex offenders to disclose their Internet accounts and requiring convicted sex traffickers to register as sex offenders.

12 to 14 years old: The typical age that a girl is first trafficked for sex.

Protect Them. All of Them. Vote YES on 35.

According to the FBI, California is home to some of the worst high intensity child sex trafficking areas in America. Places where girls, as young as 12, are sexually exploited in the light of day for the financial gain of human traffickers. A national victims' rights group study slapped California with an "F" for its weak laws to combat the terror of sex trafficking.

Here are the facts...

- California got an "F" for its weak laws against child sex trafficking.
- LA, San Diego and San Francisco are among the FBI's top cities for child sex trafficking.
- The Internet has fueled the rapid growth of sex trafficking, making the trade of women and girls easier and more anonymous and profitable than ever.

Prop. 35 Helps California Fight Back

Prop. 35 is a statewide initiative that finally and firmly fights back hard against the sex exploitation of women and children. Here's how...

- Tougher sentences for traffickers.
- Use common sense and require convicted sex traffickers to register as sex offenders.
- Make every sex offender reveal every one of their predatory Internet accounts.
- Mandatory stiff fines on human traffickers to pay for services that help victims.
- Better training for law enforcement to identify and crack down on human trafficking.
